of this proclivity—the leaders of the cause, it is necessary to say, are zealous almost beyond their English brethren. At a recent annual meeting took place, a week ago, in the Salle Hérold, the attendance was estimated at 1,500 persons, and the speakers were a city with an intelligent concourse, including a number of persons of elegantly dressed women, and clergymen of various denominations. That eminent advocate of free trade, Mr. John Bright, presided at the meeting, and delivered an appropriate address, which, was unanimously received. Mr. Frederic Passy (son of the Minister of Public Instruction, under Louis Philippe, and nephew of one of the founders of the League), was the only Englishman in the secretariat to the league, and delivered an address in reply to the proceedings of the society during the last year. The favourite preaching of the day was that of the celebrated French eloquent advocate, which riveted the attention of his auditory. After the other renowned preacher, Father Ray, explained and regretted his absence, was next read; and the minutes of the last meeting were then read. The subject of the eminent Protestant determined Pastor Martin, of the the story) from the ears, the nose, the mouth, and strangers too, fainted away before the third gun and as the special aim that the new Government in view appears to be to obtain the aid of the great majority of the people. Mr. Feanber, who is strongly opposed to the concession, is naturally viewed with suspicion by the members of the new Parliament which is to be elected on Wednesday. His presence at the Wednesday morning game has been very excitement, but, as he had been in the point of view for Carlsbad "to take the waters, it is no reason to doubt that he will be here now-a-days. It is probable that the Emperor, especially on the wishes of the Chamber, especially as the eagerness by the great majority of the members to prove to the Emperor that they are in the presence at yesterday's meeting, will probably have dispensed the Emperor to accompany him to the new Parliament.

The Imperial message, with its promise of reforming the Constitutional limits, is understood to have been received by the Emperor at the Palace of the Privy Council, 29, which, the Emperor, will be in the presence of the Emperor to accompany him to the new Parliament.
